

Abstract

Some buildings produced by Helmut Dietrich and Much Untertrifaller make use of alpine topography in a fashion that is responsive to the landscape. Finished with a civic touch, other structures designed by the architects from Vorarlberg, Austria, are joined into a more urban environment. This volume is the first to present their comprehensive work in its amplitude, which has come to include furniture and single-family dwellings, as much as housing estates, cultural edifices and an entire urban quarter. Colour photographs by Ignacio Martinez and Bruno Klomfar, texts by Walter Zschokke, and detailed planning material are arranged into a synopsis graphically elaborated by Walter Bohatsch.
