

Joar Haga

Was there a
Lutheran Metaphysics?

The interpretation of communicatio idiomatum
in Early Modern Lutheranism

Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht

Contents

Acknowledgements . . . . .	7
Preface . . . . .	9
Introduction . . . . .	11
Choice of theme and structure . . . . .	13
Some definitions and reflections on method . . . . .	17
Luther's new interpretation . . . . .	21
The role of Christology in Luther's understanding of salvation . . . . .	21
The great Christological disputations 1539–1540 . . . . .	64
Summary: Luther's Christology . . . . .	88
Melanchthon's diverging solution . . . . .	91
Melanchthon's dismissal of communicatio idiomatum . . . . .	91
Melanchthon's method . . . . .	93
Melanchthon's interpretation of Colossians 3:1–5 . . . . .	94
Melanchthon's notion of presence . . . . .	96
Summary: Melanchthon's alternative . . . . .	112
Communicatio idiomatum in Lutheran thought between the reformer and the Formula of Concord . . . . .	115
Introduction . . . . .	115
Consolidation on the left: "Consensus Tigurinus" (1549) . . . . .	116
Lutheran critique of the "Consensus Tigurinus" . . . . .	121
Christology and cosmology: The definition of presence by Brenz . . . . .	130
Jacob Schegk: a philosophical evaluation of the Württemberg Christology . . . . .	145
Summary . . . . .	154
Martin Chemnitz and his voluntary ubiquity . . . . .	156
The Formula of Concord – a hybrid construction? . . . . .	171
Critique of the Formula: The Helmstedt theologians and Johannes Kepler . . . . .	178
Summary of the chapter . . . . .	209
The controversy between Giessen and Tübingen . . . . .	213
Introduction . . . . .	213

Prelude: A report from Saxony . . . . .	216
Balthasar Mentzer and his view of the presence of Christ . . . . .	218
The response from Tübingen . . . . .	239
Summary . . . . .	267
Was there a Lutheran metaphysics? . . . . .	271
Literature . . . . .	275
Index . . . . .	295
Index rerum . . . . .	295
Index personae . . . . .	296