

Euroscepticism and the Future of European Integration

Catherine E. De Vries

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures	xv
List of Tables	xix

Part I. Public Opinion and European Integration

Introduction: Losing Hearts and Minds? Taking Stock of EU Public Opinion	3
0.1 Key Questions	4
0.2 What Lies Ahead	7
1. What Is the Matter with Europe? The Puzzles of Euroscepticism	13
1.1 The Puzzling Rise of Euroscepticism	14
1.2 Benchmarks as a Crucial Piece of the Puzzle	23
1.3 Relationship to Existing Approaches	26

Part II. The Nature of Support and Scepticism

2. In or Out? A Benchmark Theory of Support and Scepticism	33
2.1 The Nature of Support and Scepticism	35
2.2 A Benchmark Theory of Support and Scepticism	36
2.3 The Importance of Regime and Policy Evaluations	42
2.4 Measuring People's Regime and Policy Evaluations	45
2.5 Summary	55
3. Kicking Up a Fuss? From Permissive to Responsive Support and Scepticism	56
3.1 Public Responsiveness to Real-World Conditions	59
3.2 A Survey Experiment on Public Responsiveness	66
3.3 The Role of Political Sophistication	70
3.4 Summary	72

Part III. A Typology of Support and Scepticism

4. A Divided Public? Types of Support and Scepticism	77
4.1 Four Types of Support and Scepticism	78
4.2 Country Level Variation	83
4.3 Individual Level Variation	93
4.4 The Importance of Proximate Responsibility Attribution	95
4.5 Summary	101
5. Common People? Who Are Supporters and Sceptics and What Do They Want?	103
5.1 The Demographic Profile of Supporters and Sceptics	105
5.2 The Issue Priorities of Supporters and Sceptics	116
5.3 The Issue Positions of Supporters and Sceptics	121
5.4 Summary and Implications	126

Part IV. The Consequences of Support and Scepticism

6. Going Hard or Soft? Party Choice among Supporters and Sceptics	129
6.1 The Importance of Supply and Demand	131
6.2 Support for Eurosceptic Parties	139
6.3 Do Issue Positions Matter?	146
6.4 Summary and Implications	150
7. Brexit and Beyond: Leave and Remain Preferences among Supporters and Sceptics	153
7.1 The Brexit Vote	156
7.2 Remain and Leave Support in the EU	161
7.3 The Importance of Issue Priorities and Positions	163
7.4 Remain and Leave Support Post-Brexit	171
7.5 Summary and Implications	176

Part V. Public Opinion and The Future of European Integration

8. Change or Die? EU Reform Preferences among Supporters and Sceptics	183
8.1 Measuring the Reform Preferences of Supporters and Sceptics	186
8.2 Support for EU Reform Proposals	189
8.3 Eurozone Reform Preferences	196
8.4 Summary and Implications	202

9. Conclusion: A Divided Public, a Divided Union: Where Do We Go from Here?	204
9.1 The Main Contributions of the Book	205
9.2 A Divided Public: So What?	209
9.3 Can the Grand Theories of European Integration Provide Insights?	211
9.4 Can Supranational Reform Solutions Help?	214
9.5 Flexible Integration as a Way Forward	217
Appendix	223
Bibliography	227
Index	243

List of Figures

0.1. A typology of support and scepticism	9
1.1. Hard Eurosceptic party support in the 2014 European Parliamentary elections	15
1.2. A comparison of Sunderland and Bournemouth	18
1.3. The relationship between feelings of exclusive national identity and hard Eurosceptic party support in the 2014 European Parliamentary elections	20
1.4. Trends in feelings of exclusive national identity and extreme right vote shares in the Netherlands	22
1.5. Leave and Eurosceptic party support in Great Britain and Spain	24
1.6. Approval of policies and regime at the EU Level in Great Britain and Spain	25
1.7. Approval of policies and regime at the national and EU level in Great Britain and Spain	26
2.1. Defining EU support	38
2.2. Defining EU scepticism	39
2.3. EU regime and policy differential across time	50
2.4. EU regime and policy differential across time and space	51
2.5. EU regime and policy differential by unemployment	52
2.6. EU regime and policy differential by quality of government	52
2.7. Changes in EU regime and policy differentials between 2004 and 2014 across space	53
2.8. Changes in national and European regime evaluations between 2004 and 2014 across space	54
2.9. Changes in national and European policy evaluations between 2004 and 2014 across space	55
4.1. Four types of support and scepticism	78
4.2. Plotting countries in an EU differential space in 2014	81
4.3. Types of support and scepticism in 2014	82
4.4. Types of support and scepticism across countries in 2014	83

List of Figures

4.5. Distribution of types by economic conditions in 2014	85
4.6. Distribution of types by quality of government in 2014	87
4.7. Change in types 2008–2014	89
4.8. Change in types 2008–2014 across countries	90
4.9. Change in types by national conditions 2008–2014	91
4.10. Types in 2008 and 2014	92
4.11. The effect of economic and political system satisfaction on support and scepticism	94
4.12. Expectations of democracy by national conditions	98
4.13. Responsibility judgements by national conditions	99
5.1. Unemployment among the four types	106
5.2. Financial worry among the four types	107
5.3. Social positioning among the four types	108
5.4. Skill levels among the four types	109
5.5. Gender gap among the four types	110
5.6. Age gap among the four types	111
5.7. Education level among the four types	112
5.8. Policy responsibility among the four types	115
5.9. Issue priorities among the four types	116
5.10. Issue priorities of loyal supporters by national conditions	118
5.11. Issue priorities of policy sceptics by national conditions	119
5.12. Issue priorities of regime sceptics by national conditions	119
5.13. Issue priorities of exit sceptics by national conditions	120
5.14. Predicting issue positions by the four types	122
5.15. Predicting policy positions by the four types and national conditions	123
5.16. National and European attachment among the four types	125
5.17. Predicting national attachment by the four types	125
6.1. Conditions for second order and EU issue voting	132
6.2. Eurosceptic members of the 2014 European Parliament	133
6.3. Issue priorities among the four types	137
6.4. Issue priorities across member states	138
6.5. Support for Eurosceptic parties among the four types	141
6.6. Hard versus soft Eurosceptic party support among the four types	142
6.7. Left versus right Eurosceptic party support among the four types	143
6.8. Left Eurosceptic party support by unemployment and immigration as priority	144

6.9. Right Eurosceptic party support by unemployment and immigration as priority	145
6.10. Change in Eurosceptic party support by views on migration	147
6.11. Change in Eurosceptic party support by views on national control	148
6.12. Change in Eurosceptic party support by views on redistribution	149
6.13. Change in Eurosceptic party support by views on state intervention in the economy	150
7.1. Remain support among the four types, British respondents only	157
7.2. Remain support among the four types by issue priority, British respondents only	158
7.3. Predicting remain support among the four types, British respondents only	160
7.4. Remain support among the four types	162
7.5. Remain support among the four types across countries	163
7.6. Remain support among the four types by issue priority	164
7.7. Remain support among the four types by views on foreigners	165
7.8. Remain support among the four types by views on globalization	166
7.9. Predicting remain support	167
7.10. Predicting remain support among the four types by anti-foreigner sentiment	169
7.11. Predicting remain support among the four types by anti-globalization stance	170
7.12. Predicting remain support among the four types by anti-elitist stance	171
7.13. Difference in remain support among the four types, April–August 2016	172
7.14. Change in remain support among the four types, April–August 2016	173
7.15. Remain support among the four types in April–August 2016 in five countries	174
7.16. Change in remain support among the four types, April–August 2016 in five countries	174
7.17. Remain support among the four types by Brexit expectation	175
8.1. Support for EU reform in 28 member states	190
8.2. Support for EU reform in 28 member states by national conditions	191
8.3. Support for EU reform among loyal supporters in 28 member states	193
8.4. Support for EU reform among policy sceptics in 28 member states	194
8.5. Support for EU reform among regime sceptics in 28 member states	195
8.6. Support for EU reform among exit sceptics in 28 member states	195
8.7. Support for economic reform among the four types	196

List of Figures

8.8. Support for economic reform among the four types by national conditions	197
8.9. Expectations about future of Eurozone among the four types	198
8.10. Expectations about future of Eurozone among the four types by national conditions	199
8.11. Support for Eurozone budget and finance minister among the four types	200
8.12. Support for Eurozone budget and finance minister among the four types by national conditions	200
8.13. Support for EU response to member state in financial difficulty among the four types	201
8.14. Support for EU response to member state in financial difficulty among the four types by national conditions	202
9.1. Summary of the differences between the four types	208

List of Tables

2.1. Cross-validation of EU differential measures	49
3.1. Four types of events	60
3.2. Selection of events	62
3.3. Effect of event type on the EU regime differential	63
3.4. Effect of national corruption vignette	68
3.5. Effect on EU policy differential	69
3.6. Effect of political sophistication	71
3.7. Difference in treatment effect by political sophistication	72
4.1. Testing the proximate responsibility attribution assumption	100
5.1. Changes in predicted support and scepticism based on socio-demographic variables	113
6.1. Hard and soft Eurosceptic parties included in the 2014 EES	134
8.1. Example of a choice in the conjoint experiment	188
8.2. Attributes of different dimensions	188
A.1. Balance statistics	223
A.2. Results of placebo tests	224
A.3. Results of small-Hsiao tests of IIA assumption	225