

Simon V of Montfort and
Baronial Government,
1195–1218

G.E.M. LIPPIATT

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

List of Figures	xi
List of Maps	xi
List of Abbreviations	xiii
Rates of Exchange	xv
Montfort Family Tree	xvii
Introduction	1
1. Subject and Vassal	17
Family history	17
Harmony	19
Conflict	37
Competing lordships	52
2. Crusaders	56
Family and the Fourth Crusade	56
Family and the Albigensian Crusade	57
Land grants	63
Religious connections	66
Personal loyalty	67
The Zaran company	70
High baronage	74
3. Masters and Monks	79
The Holy Land	79
Social morality	85
Heresy	92
4. Lord of Montfort and Earl of Leicester	99
Inheritance	99
Image	104
Ecclesiastical patronage	109
Finance	116
Government and household	121
5. Viscount of Béziers and Carcassonne	130
Conquest	130
Image	135

Ecclesiastical patronage	138
Finance	144
Government and household	150
Reform and heresy	165
6. Duke of Narbonne and Count of Toulouse	173
Conquest	173
Image	178
Ecclesiastical patronage	181
Finance	189
Government and household	191
Reform and heresy	199
Conclusion	205
Bibliography	209
Index	225

List of Figures

4.1	Seigneurial seal (January 1196).	106
4.2	Seigneurial and vicecomital seal (1200–14 August 1215).	106
4.3	Comital counterseal of Simon III of Montfort (1176).	107
5.1	Penny biterran.	137
6.1	Comital seal (September 1216–18 April 1217).	180
6.2	Comital seal of Raymond VI of Saint-Gilles (April 1204).	180

List of Maps

I.1	The world of Simon of Montfort.	3
I.2	France.	15
I.3	England.	15
I.4	The Midi.	16
4.1	The lordship of Montfort.	100
4.2	The earldom of Leicester.	103
5.1	The viscounties of Béziers and Carcassonne.	131
6.1	The county of Toulouse and duchy of Narbonne.	174