Theodor Herzl
and the Foundation of the Jewish State

SHLOMO AVINERI

CONTENTS

ILLUSTRATIONS

Plaque on the site of the house in Budapest where Herzl was born
    (Ian Pitchford)
Herzl as a young man (Central Zionist Archives)
The title pages of eight different translations of The Jewish State (Reproduced with permission from Inyan ha-Yehudim (The Jewish Cause): Diaries 1895–1904, published by The Bialik Institute and the World Zionist Organization, 1997)
Herzl and Zionist delegation en route to Palestine, 1898 (Central Zionist Archives)
Herzl and Zionist delegation in Jerusalem, 1898 (Central Zionist Archives)
Kaiser Wilhelm II in Jerusalem, 1898 (akg-images/Imagno)
Herzl at the Second Zionist Congress in Basel, 1898 (Central Zionist Archives)
Joseph Chamberlain (Illustrated London News/Mary Evans)
Vyacheslav von Plehve (Topfoto)
Pope Pius X (akg-images)
King Victor Emmanuel III (Alinari/Topfoto)
Herzl's funeral in Vienna, 1904 (Central Zionist Archives)
Herzl Street, Tel Aviv, c.1914 (Courtsey of Kedem Auctions, Jerusalem)
The Haganah ship Theodor Herzl in Haifa harbour, 1947 (Associated Press)

Herzl's coffin arriving at Lod airport, Israel, 1949 (National Photo Collection, Government Press Office, State of Israel)

Coat of arms of the city of Herzliya (Coyote sprit/Wikimedia Commons)

Herzl's tomb at Mount Herzl, Jerusalem (Djampa/Wikimedia Commons)