

Edward II and a Literature of
Same-Sex Love

The Gay King in Fiction, 1590–1640

Michael G. Cornelius

LEXINGTON BOOKS
Lanham • Boulder • New York • London

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
1 Sexuality as Silence: Representing Edward II in Medieval English Literature	37
2 Sexuality as Identity: A King, A Lover, and a Crisis of Identity in Christopher Marlowe's Edward II	99
3 Sexuality as History: Understanding Michael Drayton's Obsession	131
4 Sexuality as (Flawed) Nature: "Let Edward be the subject of thy pen:" Augustinian Character and Contradiction in Sir Francis Hubert's The Historie of Edward the Second	175
5 Sexuality as Disease: Identification and The Role of "Defense" in Elizabeth Cary's The History of the Life, Reign, and Death of Edward II	211
6 Sexuality as (Political, Moral, Cultural) Exemplum?: The Strange Case of Edward II in Richard Niccols's Mirror for Magistrates	239
Conclusion: The Doom and Promise of History	261
Bibliography	271
Index	283
About the Author	291